Next, you can use an Eraser. It's a similar tool to the pencil in the digital world. It helps you erase unwanted pixels that might appear when you move the image around. A Gradient tool is used to easily control the look of a color on an image. You can use it to give an image a gradient look. Select the color you want to start from, the color you want to end up at, and then the amount of change you'd like. A Watermark tool is used to easily place text or other graphics on your photos. It's just like a stamp in the real world. To use it, select which fonts you want to use for the text and then place it on the image. A Pen tool is used to create shapes. You can draw freehand lines, squares, circles, rectangles, and even lines that follow the edges of an object on the image. A curve is used to control the look of the shape you create. This is an old tool that was popular with the illustrators of the 1990s. It lets you use the Blob tool to create thick, slow moving lines. It's similar to the Pen tool, but it doesn't require you to turn into Freehand mode. The Airbrush tool is the tool used to paint beautiful highlights on an image. To use the Airbrush tool, you need to place a paint brush in the air for a few seconds until it glows. Then you select the image, select the color you'd like to use, and then drag the brush around the image. The Blend tool allows you to easily apply different colors to objects in an image. To use it, select the objects you'd like to change, drag the mouse over the preview window, and then release the mouse button. A Spot Healing brush is used to easily repair pixels in an image. It works by comparing the pixels to surrounding pixels in the image. Then it replaces the pixel or paint that it thinks is in the wrong place with a color that matches what's around it. A Mosaic tool is used to create seamless (meaning that there are no visible gaps between the objects) panoramas, photos, or panoramic photographs. You can also use it to combine multiple images into one. To create a mosaic, you need to click on the first image, then hold down the shift key and click on the second image. Now Photoshop will repeat the process, automatically aligning
